This selection has become popularized all over America. The compositions to be played for the dances have been improvised purposely for Theano and four of these have not yet been published. Theano's entrance will be the ultra-dramatic story of "The Seal" that will depict the loneliness of unrequited waiting for the ship bearing her dear one, followed by the wild excitement of despair and wrath that in turn is overwhelmed by the great sea as she resigns herself and sinks into the waves. "Perfum Exotique" is the second dance drama in happy vein, wherein the ecstasy of youth and a wealth of flowers play a part. "Fate" and the inevitable, crushing power of destiny is the theme of an eloquent motion story told with a black veil.
The joy of the dawn and sunbeams quenching the gladness of the soul that radiates from finger tips is another heart story followed by "Sadness of the Moon" and the crowning "Dance of Theano" that faithfully reproduces the Alexandrian dance performed ages ago by the oriental Theano of Alexandria.

Even in conversation the beautiful Theano involuntarily expresses the shrinking timidity, the joy, the eagerness pulsating beneath the snow white skin, beaming in the lustrous eyes and schooled in varying moods in the flexible voice. In Denver Madame Theano became acquainted with Charles Wakefield Cadman and agreed with Francis Hendriks that Cadman is one of the most wonderful composers of the time. Cadman's "Sadness of the Ledge" has been dedicated to Hendriks and an oriental composition just begun will be Cadman's musical tribute to Theano, dedicated to it and written expressly for her interpretation. The distinguished artistess is in love with America and particularly the west, which she says teems with romance and the real es-ence of liberty. To return to Albuquerque some day is her urgent wish.

Sobremodo Ateneo-americans have the great fortune to meet and be entertained by a distinguished person and an artist as Madame Theano. She is the peerless demure who inspires and pleases before the footlights in the Elko theater in the shadowy glory of ancient Greece. To see her charming girl youth is even a greater treat than to see her in the demonstration of her art. For every gesture and glint is expressive of one silent soul beauty radiating from eyes all aglow like blue eyes, bewildered, rapt, and eloquent motions.
A mere sight of a girl in her teens, supple as grace and exquisitely modest. Madame Theano impresses one as being a rare painting of a mystic nymph animated and beautiful with intelligence but ready at any moment to melt into vapor. Timidity and the mystery of unapproachable silence stamped with perfect ladylike coquetry and characteristic of the oriental who is restoring to its early beauty and chastity the dama that in the past century has become professed and肆虐 till it has lost the innocence and chivalry of the earliest days. Theano has studied music who have allowed her to develop her individually, with the result that her wonderful dances given to the public abroad and in this country and America, Theano presents ever fresh improvisations, expressive of ancient emotions and interpretation of ancient legends, religious and sentimental, uttered in artistic grecian poses ranging to the floor where only now and then glimpses are had of the bare ankles and sated feet the dancer tells the stories of life's joys, ambitions and sorrows. No questionable pose of grace mars the idealism of those interpretations. Preceding the six dramatic and joyous dances by Theano, will be a piano recital by Francis Hendriks, the noted composer and pianist, who is the accompanist for the dancer.

The opening selection will be a Hindoo composition constructed on majestic lines in the modern school that is dedicated to Senor H. Wasige, the Argentine consul at Berlin. Of American and Spanish parentage, Francis Hendriks has inherited a rare talent for music, and his fame in Germany places him among the foremost composers of the day. In Berlin he became the friend of Mrs. Francis Albright and Miss Claude Albright. Of the latter Hendriks says, "there are few if any artists in the world her superior."

"Distant Bells," or in the French translation "Bells of the Mist" by Hendriks, was inspired while listening to the twilight chimes of the cathedral

O'Neill and Smith, a team of general fun-makers with a record of success behind them are featuring the vaudeville section of the new bill put on today at the New Crystal. As singers, dancers and rapid-fire conversationalists, O'Neill and Smith will prove a treat to those who enjoy high class vaudeville.

Rear Admiral Robert D. Evans, U.
S. N., retired, passed through Albuquerque Saturday evening on Santa Fe train No. 4, en route to the east.

Born October 22, 1861, to Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cole, 517 New York avenue, a son.

John L. Hutchinson, a popular employee of the Stamm company, had returned to the city after several weeks spent in the east, during which he took unto himself a bride. The young lady was Miss Lillian Barker of Pittsfield, Mass., where the wedding ceremony took place. The young people will make their home in Albuquerque, where Mr. Hutchinson has lived for several years.
